Why we love the door industry

Stronghold was founded by Daphne Eva in August 2006 and as a team, we are proud to celebrate our 10-year anniversary.

Stronghold has evolved over the years, from focusing on risks surrounding fire and escape doors in the retail sector, to eventually setting up a factory and manufacturing our own fire doors as well as a line of various specialised doors.

We love the complexity of this market and all its challenges. We are often tasked with finding solutions, which must be said; we do quite well. We believe that by being challenged, it forces us to be innovative and grow as a company, in ways we never thought possible.

Being relatively new in the market of manufacturing our own doors, it dawned on us that the only way to compete with the giants in our industry, was to be creative in our approach and do things differently. With this in mind it was decided that we had to keep up with the latest marketing trends and this is how our 'on-line store' became a vision and finally launched. We're proud to say we are the first in our industry (in SA) to take such a bold step and even though this is still very new, we are getting fantastic feedback. We admit we are constantly working on our store to improve and make the shopping experience as simple and practical as possible. Not an easy task.

Along with our 'on-line store' we have made it our mission to manufacture fire doors that are both appealing and modern, after all we all want doors that will enhance our space and compliment the interior design. Why step away from the norm of a standard production run you may ask, it's simple – we love doors.

It must be said; "our doors are only as good as the installation" we can deliver a perfectly manufactured door and if it is not installed correctly, one sits with all kinds of problems, often blaming the manufacturer. If you going to build a fire door set into a brick wall and mortar fill the frame, cross brace the frame and leave it until it sets, if you do this your frames wont belly in the middle or kick out at the bottom. Another common practice is the threshold plate being prematurely cut and the frame manipulated to fit a skew wall however, the door is not flexible resulting in the door not aligning to the frame.

If one sticks to the basic principles of installing doors and frames correctly, you will save time and money in the long run. We are in the process of designing a frame and door kit that we believe will solve 70% of installation problems on site.

Stronghold Fire & Security are excited about the new door ranges on offer.

Not only do we manufacture and install doors, we offer a full range of door hardware that can be supplied separately or factory fitted to your doors. The one brand we are particularly keen on is GripForce as their door hardware is unique in that it is built to last in environments where other brands fall short.

Everything we do or plan to do is born from the notion that we can take the collective problems experienced by developers, contractors and clients and find a permanent solution, by changing what doesn't work and replacing it with something that does.

We want our doors to stand the test of time and if we do it right, they sure can.
